

Human Resource Database

(www.hrdb.go.kr)

Established pursuant to Article 19-3 of the State Public Officials Act, the Human Resource Database is a national personal information management system that collects and manages information on public office candidates to ensure the recruitment of top talent for major public positions. Since 1999, the system has maintained the profiles of over 290,000 (as of 2017) specialists in a wide range of areas, including academia, business, the legal community, and NGOs.

The Human Resources Database Registry Application

The ministry of personnel management would like to register your information into the national human resources database so that it can be used for international exchange as well as the utilization of global experts.

Based on your information in the database, the ministry of personnel management would also like to keep providing you with some useful information about human resources (HR) in Korea such as HR policies and training programs for HR development.
